Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comWw when Dorothy finds herself plunked in a new and strange land she speaks this famous line about her dog. It's the perfect thing to say every time you meet something unknown. You can pretty much count on this kind of thing happening one by one twice a week. There's a reason this movie is a favorite classic that everyone has seen over and over again. Transportation for life. And also, you know there's no place like home, right? Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comArnold Schwarzenegger isn't exactly known for being a thespian, so his line delivery worked perfectly as a robot killer. The exterminator delivers the famous line to a police station bureaucrat who won't let him in. Sure, it comes back-this time barreling inside a car and destroying the police station and everything in it. Now the virtual line is also beloved as a meme or GIF. Want more scary movies? Here are the scariest movies of all time. Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comHumphry Bogart makes it look so smooth and cool to be completely practical. He sends Ilsa and Laszlo to a great sacrifice for the greater good. He's thinking about long-term results. It's not governed by some absurd, romantic idea - because the problems of three little people don't amount to a hill of beans in this crazy world. Calling gorgeous Ingrid Bergman a child is perfect as she acts just like a flattened dad. Which is fine, since they'll always have Paris. Add these 10 most romantic movies of all time to your list. See the list of movies that were better than the book. Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comChief Brody was occasionally tossing shark bait into the water, no big deal when we finally get a taste of jaws. It's simulated. He back to the engine room of their tiny little ship and mutters the famous catchphrase. This is the perfect line to say whenever you feel overwhelmed by anything. It doesn't have to be a shark. Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comJack Nicholson's witness stand meltdown is melodrama at its best. It gets even better than Tom Cruise and Kevin Bacon hamming it up in the background. I wish everyone could confess it easily. While Colonel Jessup may be grotesque, as he puts it, he saves lives. And you need him on the wall. But he also ordered the code red, and now he's going to jail. Emma Kapotens/Rd.comFelicia appears outside in front of the ice cube terrace and constantly asks to borrow this and this. Everyone has an annoying neighbor, office companion, roomie or otherwise annoying person who needs to be properly rejected. These guys are now collectively known as Felicia. You don't have to answer these requests. Just say good-bye. It's done and done. It's a discarded line that's now ubiquitous. Thank you, Felicia. Emma Kapotens/Rd.comTom Cruise comes and gives Renee Zellweger a great romantic talk. The big part is that we have to deliver it in front of a women's support group. Women. You can replace almost everything for hello and stop your friends with: You had me in the coffee . . . Wine... Baseball... Ice cream. Watch one of these best tearjerker movies. Emma Kapotres/Rd.comClint Eastwood, aka Dirty Harry, pronounces this one-liner with characteristic grit. He's in battle with the slowest, most uncoordinated crooks. One of them grabs a hostage. Eastwood throws the famous Smith & Wesson and kills him with the infamous phrase. The criminal surrenders. Go ahead and say this line whenever you want to kill people (it works best if you pretend to be Clint Eastwood.) Emma Kapo bones/Rd.comCounterculture youth made this thriller a cult favourite while fearing the daylight from their conservative parents. These are the legions of street gangs that run amok at night in the city. Each gang has a trick like wearing overalls, purple vests or baseball clothes with mime make-up.
